

Five Steps to Getting Your Baby Sleeping Through the Night!

Hey there!!

Karoline Babaian here, Founder of The Sleep Nest and your Certified Sleep Coach!

Thanks so much for taking the time to request your copy of this free report, "The Five Steps to Getting Your Baby to Sleep Through the Night."

It's my hope that this report will give you the tools to teach your son or daughter the skills they need to fall asleep easily... and stay asleep all night! If you have any questions at all after reading this report, please feel free to contact me directly.

Since you're obviously concerned about your child's sleep, I'd like to offer you a FREE 15-minute consultation to help answer any questions you might have. Contact information to follow after the Five Steps.

Here's your free report! I hope it helps...

The Five Steps to Getting Your Baby to Sleep Through the Night Karoline Babaian, Founder & Certified Sleep Coach

If your baby or toddler is having trouble sleeping through the night, the first thing you should know is... you're not alone! Studies show that up to 30% of babies have sleep problems, and that 75% of parents would like to change their babies' sleep habits.

The good news is that there are some quick and easy things you can do - starting tonight - to help your little one starting sleeping all through the night... and taking long, restful naps during the day!

So, as promised, here they are...

Step 1: Choose an early bedtime.

The best time to put your baby or toddler to bed is sometime between 6 and 8 o'clock in the evening. This ensures that your child will be able to get a solid 11-13 hours of sleep during the night. (And yes... that is how much sleep children should be getting every night up until the age of about 10.)

Step 2: Put your child to sleep in the same place every night.

Whether your child has a room of their own or shares a room with parents or siblings, it's important that you put your son or daughter to sleep in the same place every night (and for naps during the day as much as possible.) Putting your child to bed in a familiar place lets them know they are safe and that they are in a place where sleep is expected of them.

Step 3: Create a predictable bedtime routine.

Consistency and predictability are really important to babies and toddlers. When they know what to expect at bedtime, it makes it much easier for them to make the transition from waking to sleeping – and that's why creating a bedtime routine is so important!

A good example of a bedtime routine might be something like this:

6:30 p.m. Bath time

6:35 p.m. Put on pajamas

6:40 p.m. Nursing or bottle (babies under 6mos only)

6:55 p.m. Story or songs (toddlers 2yrs+)

7:00 p.m. Into crib or bed AWAKE.

Your bedtime routine shouldn't take more than about 30 minutes, and it's VERY important that the routine is the same every single night. The repetition and predictability are what let your child know that he or she will soon be expected to fall asleep.

Step 4: Put your baby to bed AWAKE!

If you've been rocking, nursing, or otherwise soothing your baby to sleep, this is going to seem like a tough one... but it's actually the most important step! It's only by letting your baby fall asleep WITHOUT your help at bedtime that he or she can learn the skills necessary to stay asleep through the night.

Step 5: If your baby wakes up during the night, wait a few minutes before intervening.

Everyone - babies and adults alike - will actually wake up several times every night. For most adults, these wakings are so brief that we don't even remember them the next morning. However, many babies will immediately start to fuss or cry when they wake up. This is simply because they haven't learned how to fall asleep on their own. If a baby has been nursed or rocked to sleep at bedtime since birth, it's not surprising that they wouldn't know how to fall asleep independently. The good news is that many babies can figure out how to get back to sleep within just a few minutes of waking up in the night!

If your child continues to fuss or cry for more than a few minutes, you'll want to go in and offer some comfort, but it's important to let your child do the work of falling back to sleep. You can speak softly to your child and do some gentle rubbing or patting, but you should avoid picking your child up and rocking or nursing back to sleep.

So there you have it... the 5 most important things you need to know about getting your child to sleep through the night. Of course, it's important to keep in mind that every child is a little different - there's no "magic formula" that will work 100% of the time for every baby!

My passion (and my profession) is helping parents like you develop customized plans for solving child sleep problems, so if you have any questions about what you've just read, please feel free to get in touch!

If you'd like more information about booking a full-service sleep consultation with me, the best thing to do is to visit my website at: www.thesleepnest.com.

You can always call me directly at 800-431-2029 or e-mail thesleepnest@gmail.com.

P.S. If you'd like to set up a FREE 15-minute sleep consultation (which we can do over the telephone at a time that is convenient for you), please contact me by telephone or e-mail using the contact information above.

Looking forward to speaking with you!

Sleep well!

Karoline Babaian, Certified Sleep Coach
Founder, The Sleep Nest